

Statement from President and CEO Rex Geveden on BWXT's Ongoing Operations

April 8, 2020

LYNCHBURG, Va.--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- BWX Technologies, Inc. (NYSE: BWXT) today released a statement from President and Chief Executive Officer Rex Geveden regarding BWXT's response to the ongoing COVID-19 health crisis.

"The global pandemic is an extraordinary and unprecedented situation for our business and our employees," said Geveden. "Weeks ago, we created a pandemic planning and response team to address the policies, procedures and practices required to respond to all aspects of the COVID-19 crisis.

"We have been acutely focused on protecting the health and safety of our employees. We updated policies to ensure appropriate benefits are in place for employees who may become ill or need to self-quarantine for other reasons, including travel and suspected exposures. We have also implemented a number of measures to protect our workers, including shift staggering, social distancing, and modification of food services, among many others. And to the maximum extent possible, our employees are working remotely.

"Because of its roles in national security, electric power generation and nuclear medicine, BWXT has been designated an essential business by both the U.S. federal government and by the applicable Canadian provincial governments where our facilities are located. Accordingly, all 12 major operating facilities are open and operating at this time."
